

St. Francis (NY)

Terriers

NEC Predicted Finish: Tie-5th

2004-05 Record: 13-15, 9-9 NEC

Since the start of the 1997-98 season, St. Francis (NY) has been the NEC's toughest team at home. The Terriers are 71-22 (.763) over the last eight years at the Pope Center and have not lost more than four games at home in any single year.

Allan Sheppard

Last season, Sheppard joined St. Francis (PA)'s Darshan Luckey as the only two first-year players in the last 10 seasons to capture three consecutive NEC Rookie of the Week awards. Prior to Luckey, who was tabbed the league's top rookie five straight weeks in 2002-03, you have to go all the way back to January, 1995 when Fairleigh Dickinson's Rahshon Turner was honored three weeks in a row. Sheppard, an athletic 6'5" swingman, received a conference-high four weekly honors in 2004-05 and went on to be named NEC Rookie of the Year at season's end after averaging 11.4 points and 4.4 rebounds, while shooting at a 51.8 percent clip from the field.

There will be a new look on the St. Francis (NY) sidelines this season as Brian Nash takes the reigns of one of the NEC's flagship programs over the last decade. While the Terriers have shown remarkable consistency by reaching the NEC Tournament 15 consecutive seasons, it is the one mountain the NEC charter member has yet to scale - winning its first conference title - that is Nash's first and foremost goal. Nash, who served as an assistant coach at Seton Hall the last four seasons, takes over a program loaded with returning talent, but one that will be without the services of its floor general and leader of the Terriers' freewheeling offense, Tory Cavalieri. A player Nash is keenly familiar with - he led the Terriers to a win over St. John's and nearly engineered an upset in a one-point setback to Seton Hall last season - Cavalieri was a second team all-NEC performer as a senior and finished his stellar career with 1,196 points, 590 assists and a spot in St. Francis folklore as one of the program's all-time greats. Likely to be handed the keys to the team in 2005-06 is senior Tristan Smith, who in his first year after transferring from St. John's averaged 11.3 ppg, including 26 in his debut against Army last December. Cat-quick with the ball, Smith can play either guard position and is equally adept at creating his own shot or spotting up from three-point range, where he drilled 33 a year ago. Accompanying Smith in an experienced backcourt are seniors Christian Brown and Sean Dantzler, along with junior Ruandy Melo and sophomore Nick Jones. The 6-4 Brown is one of the grizzled veterans on the team, whose long distance bombing resume includes 1111 career trifectas. He was one of four St. Francis players to average in double-digits a year ago, contributing 11.4 ppg, and his 52 treys and 40.6 percentage from downtown ranked him in the NEC top-ten in both categories. Dantzler is another gunslinger from the outside who sat out last season with injuries after drilling 51 shots from outside the arc in 2003-04. Jones, a hard-nosed off guard, earned a surprise starting nod as a freshman and averaged 6.0 ppg on the season. Melo (2.6 ppg) capably spelled Cavalieri at the point last year and hit some big shots as the season wore on. Up front, the Terriers will feature an intriguing blend of size and athleticism. Junior Allan Sheppard, a lanky 6-5 swingman, was tabbed the NEC Rookie of the Year last season after leading all NEC newcomers with 11.4 ppg and 51.8 percent shooting from the floor. One of the league's best finishers in the open floor, he not only thrives in an end-to-end setting, but also poses defensive problems in the half court for opposing coaches with his quickness and length. Speaking of length, the Terriers also welcome back 6-7 senior forward Devon Neckles, who finished second in the NEC last season with 43 blocks despite playing just 19 games due to injuries. Blessed with tremendous defensive instincts and great wingspan, he can also get it done on the offensive end, where he averaged 7.4 ppg and converted 51.4 percent of his shot attempts. Due in part to Neckles injury troubles, sophomore James St. Robert earned 20 starts at center in his first year with the team. Active defensively and on the boards, the 6-8, 230 lb. St. Robert blocked 22 shots and averaged 3.8 ppg. Also expected to play a role this season is 6-7 sophomore forward Sami Pekkola (4.3 ppg), a pure shooter who netted 22 three-pointers last year. Nash, who made his mark as a recruiter in his previous coaching stops, wasted no time upon his hiring in late March, scoring big with the signing of 6-9, 230 lb. Lex James out of the City College of San Francisco. One of the most bally-hooded recruits in the conference, James could be the missing interior force in the middle the Terriers have lacked since the graduation of Chris Sockwell in 2003. Also joining the squad is 6-6 forward John Gooden, who played a year of postgraduate ball at Gunnery Prep after competing scholastically at New York's Cardinal Hayes.

Brian Nash

Alma Mater: Keene State '92

Record at SFNY: First year

Overall Record: First Year

The lone addition to the NEC coaching ranks in 2005-06, Nash is the 16th coach in St. Francis basketball history, which dates back to 1896 as the oldest collegiate program in New York City. Nash is no stranger to the St. Francis program as his father, Raymond, played for the Terriers from 1960-63 and is currently President of nearby Bishop Ford High School.

Five Questions With: Christian Brown

Perhaps no player in the NEC played a more pivotal role on his team than did Tory Cavalieri, who was lost to graduation after a stellar career at St. Francis (NY). With so much of the attack centered around him, how will the team compensate for the loss in leadership, and what direction do you see the team taking in 2005-06?

You are absolutely right; no player in the NEC played a more pivotal role on his team than Tory Cavalieri. The team will compensate for the loss in leadership by having other players step up and take responsibility. We have five seniors on the team so that should help. Tory also left an imprint on the team. He was a perfect example of a leader on and off the court. We followed him last season, and before one can lead they must learn how to follow first. I think that our team is going in the right direction, and I have no doubt that we are going to have a successful season.

Describe the transition to Brian Nash as head coach.

The transition to Brian Nash as a head coach has been a smooth and pleasant one. The transition has gone so well, due to the fact that he is honest, straightforward, and a professional. He reminds me of my Rice High School Coach Maurice Hicks. They are both young, but they are very experienced coaches, who respect and love their players. Coach Nash and I have built a strong relationship since he was appointed head coach in late March. It seems as if he has coached me for my entire collegiate career.

What were your feelings and the team's feelings after beating St. John's last season?

It was a great moment defeating St. John's for not only the players, but also St. Francis College. It was the first time defeating them in a long time in school history. Playing St. John's is not just a game, it has a lot more behind it. Most of the players on both sides grew up playing against each other whether through AAU teams or High School ball. Also, many of the players are friends, so it allows the winning team "bragging rights" for the rest of the season and summer. But most importantly, they are supposed to be the best university in the State of New York. So to the media and on paper they are supposed to beat us, but we proved them and the media wrong.

You are noted as one of the top marksman in the conference. With that in mind, which NEC players do the best job preventing you from getting good looks at the hoop?

The best player who prevents me from getting good looks at the basket has to be my teammate Tristan Smith in practice. He does such a good job in practice that when game time comes and I get an extra few seconds to get the shot off, my eyes light up. But I would have to say Wagner as a whole does the best job of any other team in our conference. Their style of basketball is to get into you and not allow you to get comfortable looks.

As a native New Yorker, describe the qualities that make a City guard so unique.

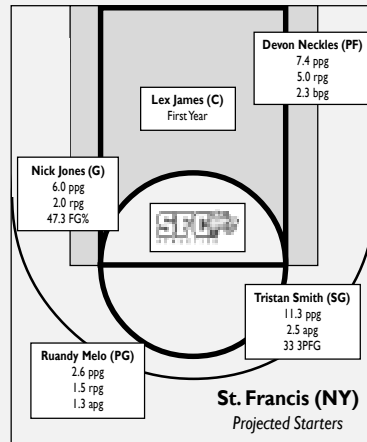

As a native New Yorker the qualities that make a New York City guard so unique are heart, toughness, hunger, confidence, and pride. New York basketball players play as if we have a chip on our shoulder every time we lace up our shoes and step inside those four lines. These are the qualities that made the careers of players such as Tiny Archibald, Kenny Smith, Kenny Anderson, Stephon Marbury, Felipe Lopez, Luis Flores and Ben Gordon so great.

St. Francis (NY)

Terriers

Not only has first year head coach Brian Nash assembled a challenging schedule for his team, but one with a distinct New York flavor. Along with their two annual games with neighborhood rival Long Island, the Terriers will also take on teams from the Bronx (Fordham & Manhattan), Queens (St. John's), Staten Island (Wagner) and Long Island (Hofstra). In keeping with the local motif, 13 of the 15 players on the St. Francis (NY) roster are from either New York City or Long Island.

Tristan Smith

Smith, a transfer from St. John's, made an immediate impact upon his arrival last December 4th when he scored 25 points and hit all five of his shots from three-point range in his debut against Army. One of the quickest end-to-end players in the league with the ball in his hands, the 6'1" Smith will see plenty of time off the ball this season in order to better exploit his offensive skills (11.3 ppg, 33 three-pointers in 2004-05).

St. Francis (NY)

The Numbers

St. Francis (NY) has finished at or above .500 in NEC play eight straight seasons, the longest active streak in the conference and tied with Fairleigh Dickinson (1981-89) and Marist (1982-90) for the longest stretch in league history. The Terriers finished 9-9 against conference competition in 2004-05 and qualified for the NEC Tournament for the 15th consecutive season (second to FDU's league record 18 from 1984-01).
