

St. Francis (NY)

Terriers

NEC Predicted Finish: 10th

2007-08 Record: 7-22, 4-14 NEC

The Terriers may have fielded one of the most competitive 20 loss teams in recent memory last season. St. Francis dropped 14 games by eight points or less, including eight by five or fewer and four in overtime. The tight nature of St. Francis (NY)'s games last season also extended to the team's victories as six of the Terriers' seven wins came by five points or less.

To refer to St. Francis (NY) as the "new look" Terriers may be somewhat of a stretch, but a slew of fresh faces bring renewed optimism to the program, which missed qualifying for the NEC Tournament for just the second time in the last 18 seasons a year ago. The team's Achilles' heel in 2007-08 was a combination of poor shooting from both the line and three-point range, as well as a failure to deliver the knockout blow. As a result, the Terriers dropped eight conference games (and 14 overall) by eight points or less, including three overtime setbacks over a three-week stretch in January. While St. Francis recovered somewhat down the stretch and had an opportunity to secure a playoff berth on the final day of the regular season, a home loss to local rival Long Island ended a frustrating year in Brooklyn Heights.

Determined to change the team's fortunes in 2008-09, fourth year head coach Brian Nash's offseason recruiting efforts reaped dividends with a seven-player bonanza. While there will be ample opportunity for the newcomers to log extensive minutes on the court, the Terriers do return a veteran leader in Jamaal Womack, along with his starting backcourt partner Ricky Cadell, who comes off a solid freshman campaign. Womack, a senior who averaged 12.1 ppg last season, is one of the fastest coast-to-coast players in the conference, and often dictates the pace of the game with his quickness and defensive tenacity. At 5'8", he possesses a shooting guard mentality inside a point guard body. Womack hit 72 three-pointers last season, and his 163 career trifectas rank him second among active NEC players. Cadell, 6'2", was thrust into the spotlight upon his arrival and did not disappoint, starting 26 games at the point and averaging 9.3 ppg. Displaying composure befitting an upperclassman, he led the Terriers with 2.6 apg and also made 26 shots from downtown. Sophomore Rocco Rubino, a 6'2" guard, showed flashes of potential last season, and could settle into a role as a designated three-point marksman this coming year.

Up front, junior wing player Kayode Ayeni was one of the NEC's most improved players last season. A long, lean athletic marvel, the 6'5" Ayeni (7.7 ppg) thrives in the open court, but will also mix it up inside - he ranked second on the team with 5.7 rpg - and float out to three-point range on occasion (19 treys). Senior forward John Gooden is the most experienced member of the Terriers along with Womack. A hard-nosed interior player, the 6'6" Gooden (2.5 ppg) is active around the hoop and adept at converting second chance opportunities. Junior Rainier Rickards gives St. Francis depth at the two and three spots.

With outside shooting being a sore spot last season, Nash sought to remedy that deficiency by stocking his roster with a number of players with range, most notably 6'4" bomber Tom Ward, one of two English recruits who played their high school ball in the Canary Islands. Ward averaged 17.0 ppg and handed out 5.0 apg last season. His high school teammate, 6'9" center Richard Clark, competed for the 20-and-under English National Team last summer and contributed 13.0 ppg and 8.0 rpg as a senior, while also displaying a sweet stroke from long distance. The Terriers will feature eight New York City born players on the roster this season, including a pair of local recruits. Junior forward/center Nigel Byam played at Edward R. Murrow in Brooklyn, then earned all-conference honors after averaging 14.3 ppg and 8.6 rpg while competing at Carl Albert State College in Poteau, OK last season. An inside-outside threat, the 6'7" Byam will add to the team's athleticism and give the Terriers another gazelle on the break. A combo guard who led Poly Prep to a 25-1 record last season, Justin Newton will likely spell both Womack and Cadell. A 6-footer, Newton tallied 17.5 ppg, 5.0 rpg and 4.0 apg en-route to all-State honors. Junior forward/center Nigel Lee and his 6'6", 250 lb. frame will add some bulk to the lineup. A Glendale, MD native, Lee played for Frederick CC last season, recording 10.7 ppg and 6.5 rpg. The final piece of the recruiting puzzle is 6'7" forward Herman Wrice. The Philadelphia product played high school ball in Riverside, NJ, then travelled even further north to compete for Monroe (NY) CC, where he was tabbed second team all-region last season.

Jamaal Womack

With 841 career points, Womack will likely become the first Terrier player in six years to hit the 1,000-point mark. Clifford Strong was the last, having scored 1,090 points from 2000-03. Womack, who is the team's leading returning scorer after hitting for 12.1 ppg in 2007-08, has developed into one of the top three-point shooting threats in the conference. After hitting 24 trifectas as a freshman, he sank 67 as a sophomore and 72 - fifth most in the conference - in his junior campaign a year ago. His 163 career three-pointers rank him second among active NEC players.

Five Questions With: Jamaal Womack

1. Fill in the blank. In order for St. Francis to contend for the NEC title this season, we must:

We must truly play like a team and have less turnovers, a better shooting percentage and continue to play aggressive defense.

2. What has been your most memorable game at St. Francis?

Manhattan College. In my sophomore year, I scored a then career-high 21 points and hit my first game-winner. In that same year, I hit a career best nine three-pointers against Robert Morris and raised my career-high to 31 points.

3. Coach Nash added a whole host of newcomers in the offseason. Is there one player, or perhaps a group of players who have already impressed you?

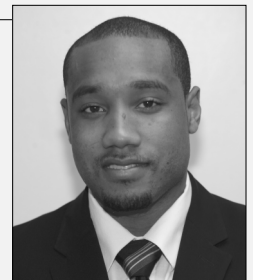

Well, honestly I believe all of incoming players will impact the game in some way. The two that really stand out to me are Justin Newton and Nigel Byam.

4. Music seems to have been part of your life since you were young and were a member of the Boys Choir of Harlem. Last year, you sang on a segment of Holding Court during an NEC television broadcast. Is music something you will continue to pursue after graduating from St. Francis?

To be honest, maybe. I have been involved in music my whole life, so I don't believe I will ever give it up. Last year, I sang backup vocals on MTV for a band called Cartel and the desire to sing came up again. I am pretty sure at one point in my future, I will be involved in music and entertainment.

5. As a native of the Bronx, who are some of the toughest New York City guards you have played against?

Some of the toughest New York City guards I have played against in my career are Sebastian Telfair (Minnesota Timberwolves), Levance Fields (Pittsburgh), A.J. Price (UConn) and Russell Robinson (Kansas). These are players I have faced at least three times in my career and each one is tough in his own right.

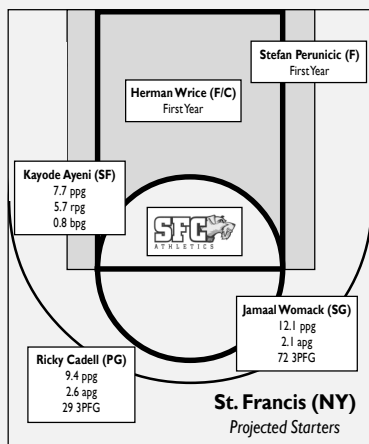

St. Francis (NY)

Terriers

As has become tradition, St. Francis (NY)'s schedule is a testament to the number of local rivalries the Terriers have built over the years. With home games against Manhattan and Columbia, and road tilts at St. John's, Hofstra and Seton Hall, the slate has a New York Metro feel to it. The Terriers' only significant road trip is a challenging two-game, three-day swing to Akron and Ohio - both 2008 post-season participants - over the holiday break.

Ricky Cadell

Stepping directly into a starting role, Cadell blossomed into one of the NEC's top rookie guards last season when he finished fourth on the club with 9.3 ppg and ranked second with 2.6 apg. He served notice of his potential in arguably the toughest game on the St. Francis (NY) schedule last season when he hit 8-9 shots from the floor and finished with 19 points in a four point loss to Ohio University, a team that reached the second round of the postseason College Basketball Invitational. Another notable effort for the New York City product was a 17 point performance in an ironman 53-minute stint during the Terriers' triple-overtime loss at Saint Francis (PA) in late January.
